Totally Tested!

TEKST 2

- 1p ● 2 Hoe ontdekte een Amerikaanse jager, volgens onderstaand bericht, dat hij niet met een wilde beer te maken had?
- A De beer bleek te kunnen fietsen.
  - B De beer liep niet weg voor de jager.
  - C De beer liet zich aaien door een voorbijganger.
  - D De beer viel de postbode niet aan.

Strange but true!

A bear was bought from a Russian circus by a tourist agent after he was asked to provide an American visitor with a “wild bear hunt”. The bear was released into Moscow’s Perdelkino Forest and the tourist got ready to hunt him down. As the hunter closed in on his prey, a postman passed by on his bike, saw the bear and tumbled off in surprise. Recalling his Big Top training, the bear grabbed the bike and pedalled off! The American later sued the tourist agent for fraud!

TEKST 3

- 1p ● 3 Wat is ‘Every picture tells a story’?
- A een prijsvraag over de geschiedenis van Groot-Brittannië
  - B een reeks artikelen over de geschiedenis van de fotografie
  - C een rubriek met door lezers ingezonden foto’s
  - D een wedstrijd voor lezers van The Daily Mail

Every picture tells a story

THIS regular picture feature in the Daily Mail Readers’ Letters page offers you the chance to submit your photographs for publication. They can be previously unseen, of interesting features and events, fascinating insights into famous people or occasions, or a little bit of history you were able to witness.

IN THE early 1900s, my parents – who were born and lived all their lives in Plaistow, East London – belonged to a local cycling club called The Pelly Wheelers, based in Pelly Road, Plaistow. They had regular outings to Epping Forest and other ‘green’ areas now sadly built-up. The girls wore long dresses and some had more daring divided skirts for easier movement. On carnival days, they decorated the cycles with coloured paper threaded round the spokes, and paper rosettes over the handlebars.

Mrs AUDREY SHORER, Ilford, Essex.

Riding high: Bertha Hockley (Audrey Shorer’s mother) is on the right. Percy Hockley (Audrey’s father) took the photograph

■ SEND your pictures, with full details of who and what they depict, as far as you know it, to Picture Panel, Daily Mail, 2 Derry Street, London W8 5TT. Enclose an SAE if you want your picture returned.

- 1p ○ 4 Je kijkt graag naar oorlogsfilms.
 → Welke film kies je?
 Schrijf het nummer van de film op.

River Phoenix

1 In 1993, River Phoenix, a young actor who had spoken out on the evil of drugs, collapsed on an LA pavement, after having taken a lethal cocktail of drugs.
5 Many fans believe he had his drink spiked, but that was not the case. River had taken drugs of his own free will and lost his life to them. This is his story...

2 The early years

10 On August 23, 1970, River was born in the commune where his parents used to live. River's father John was made archbishop of a religious cult and the family set out for the jungles of South America to spread the Word. By the age of five, 15 living in total poverty, River and his sister Rain were forced to beg on the streets of Caracas, Venezuela. At night the family slept on the beach.
"It was disgusting," River recalled afterwards. "We were living in a shack. It had no toilet and it was 20 infested with rats." 7 River's dad became disillusioned with the cult. The Phoenix family, which by now included sister Liberty and brother Leaf, returned to the US.

3 In 1978, after the birth of River's youngest sister, 25 named Summer, his mother Arlyn moved the family to Hollywood so the children could earn a living as performers. "We had a vision that our children could captivate the world," she enthused. River's agent quickly found him work on a number of 30 commercials, but River hated doing them. "I felt the constant lying, smiling on cue and the product naming was going to drive me crazy," he said.
Fortunately, he got a part in a popular TV series
Seven Brides for Seven Brothers. Then, at 15, he 35 appeared in the sci-fi film Explorers. The following year he won the role that made him famous, Chris Chambers in Stand By Me.

4 Fame and Fortune

Suddenly River was a Hollywood name and girls 40 everywhere were falling for his good looks. But the young actor was determined not to let the success go to his head. "People get lost," he said, "they think they have it under control but their lives are in pieces." The film offers rolled in. His next film was 45 Mosquito Coast, with Harrison Ford.
5 His Oscar nomination for Running on Empty confirmed River's position on the A-list of Hollywood actors. A strict vegetarian, River used his success to promote the benefits of a 'clean' 50 lifestyle and spoke out against the fur trade and the destruction of the rainforests. And he talked about how easy it is for people in the movie business to slip into drug abuse. "You don't have to seek it out," he said, "it finds you... It's so accessible. I 55 hate all that."

6 Although by 1989 River's career was going from strength to strength, his personal life was a very different story. Sometime, somewhere, River had begun dabbling with drugs and had quickly become 60 addicted. The Hollywood publicity machine kept the news from his fans. Behind the scenes, River's life was spiralling out of control. In 1993, from the set of his last unfinished movie, Dark Blood, he left a message on a friend's answerphone saying: "I'm 65 having a hard time keeping my head above water in this crazy business."

River as his fans remember him.

7 The last hours

One evening after filming, River had met up with some friends at a club in LA. During the night he 70 became hyperactive and suddenly began to vomit and started to shudder violently. Paramedics took him to a hospital. Blood samples indicated valium and cocaine at high levels. After 20 minutes in the emergency room, River was pronounced dead on 75 31 October, 1993. A medic at the scene said: "It was the classic cocaine overreaction. It just nails people and stops the heart."

'Sugar'

C River would never take a mixture of drugs.

TEKST 7

- 1p ● 13 Wie van de drie briefschrijvers krijgt het advies om zijn/haar probleem met anderen te bespreken?
- A Amy
  - B Gijandra
  - C Leo

WHY CAN'T I KISS?

Q: My boyfriend finished with me the day after our first kiss. He went round telling everybody that I couldn't kiss and some of his friends are now calling me 'fish lips'.

What did I do wrong? I don't think I'll ever kiss anybody again.
Amy (17)

A: The only thing you did wrong was get involved with this lad in the first place. He obviously used your kissing encounter as a way of backing out without making himself look stupid.

He was completely insensitive to your feelings and is clearly not worth worrying over. He said what he did to try and impress his mates and as for them calling you fish lips, try to ignore it.

Don't let this boy put you off, I'm sure there are lots of lads who would like to share a snog with you.

FORBIDDEN LOVE

Q: I am an Asian girl and my religion does not allow boyfriends. My parents are also very strict about this. I am not allowed to date anybody and they worry when I talk to boys.

I have started going out with a boy and I have fallen in love with him. If my parents found out, they would be very disappointed in me and would never let me see him again. I can't talk to anybody in my family.

What can I do?
Gijandra (16)

A: You need to tell your parents and explain the situation. They might understand. They would be more disappointed if they found out you were lying to them.

Tell them how you feel about this boy and suggest a meeting. They might like him. Chances are they won't react as badly as you expect. If your parents truly aren't happy about you having a boyfriend and feel you are betraying your religion you may have to decide if your relationship with this boy is really worth the hassle.

I'M SO SHY

Q: Can you help me? I'm scared of meeting people. I'm a shy, quiet person and can't mix very well with new people. I like reading and music and am happy with my own company. But others of my age seem to be going out and having a good time and I'm worried I'm missing out. I have a few close friends I get on well with, but am beginning to wonder if I'm normal. Shouldn't I be going to pubs and clubs?

Leo (18)

A: The first thing is, don't worry! You're normal! Lots of people suffer from shyness, and not everybody likes to live it up in a crowded pub or noisy nightclub. It's not always the fun others make it out to be.

If you do want to go out more, why not ask your friends if you could join them next time they have a date? If they're good friends, they wouldn't mind and would probably welcome your company. But be positive and you may be surprised at how much you have to offer others.

Blondes

Do they really have more fun?

THEY'RE RENOWNED FOR BEING THE LIFE AND SOUL OF THE PARTY. BUT IF A BRUNETTE TURNS BLONDE CAN IT CHANGE HER LIFE? A WOMAN TELLS HER STORY.

1 FLIC EVERETT, 28, a journalist from Sale, in Manchester, says:

"I dyed my hair blonde 10 years ago to attract the man I fancied. I decided I was going to go for it and make myself impossible to ignore. So I paid £40 to have my dark brown hair lightened to golden yellow, and I bought a red dress. I need hardly say, it worked a treat.

2 Blonde hair really did seem to have an effect on men. I loved it. Complete strangers would wink and grin for no reason. For a couple of months, I adored the attention. The bloke in question was now keen. Whenever I went out I got chatted up, and people referred to me as "a blonde". I felt like a girl in an advert, all light-hearted and carefree. My friends said it suited me, too. But that was before the roots started showing.

3 After a few weeks, I looked like a tragic heroin addict. Another £40 later, my hair was back to its golden hue, but my love for blonde was fading. I also began to notice that all these newly-keen men paid far more attention to my breast size than my IQ size. They assumed that a blonde was as dim as a one-watt bulb, and were accordingly amazed when I said anything even half-interesting. I began to look longingly at pictures of Isabella Rossellini, the way I'd once looked at pictures of Michelle Pfeiffer. And one day, I bought a packet of dark brown dye, and went back to normal. It was such a relief.

4 No-one looked at me in the street, no-one talked to my chest. People sometimes even listened when I spoke. I missed the attention for a while, but it hadn't really been me anyway. As a brunette, I had a lot more fun, I didn't feel like I had to prove myself. And as for the bloke I'd dyed it for – he went off with another brunette in the end."

The Verdicts

5 Christian Gardiner, UK head of colour at Vidal Sassoon, says:

"Blonde hair is younger-looking, it reflects light across the face, and makes hair look thicker. Going blonde is as good as having a holiday. It's a complete change – women often change their make-up and their clothes, too. Blondes aren't stupid, but they do get more attention. Women nearly always love being blonde, but sometimes their husbands don't, because that extra attention makes them jealous. Going blonde makes a woman stand tall and gives her extra confidence. I think every woman should be blonde at some time in her life."

6 Liz Baker, a Colour Me Beautiful consultant, says:

"Women go blonde generally to look and feel brighter and because it's more noticeable. But some women come in and say they don't want to be blonde any more, because they aren't taken as seriously at work as before. And then there's your wardrobe. If you go blonde, you'll find different clothes suit you. Darker or bright colours can make you look washed out – navy and lighter shades work well. However, pastels aren't very professional – which is another reason blondes may not be taken seriously."

7 Hal Beloff, a psychologist at Edinburgh University, says:

"The attraction of blondness is all about first impression. After the first meeting, you want to know what kind of person she is – and that goes way beyond hair colour. Usually, women who dye their hair blonde are also the women who want to be appreciated by men, who smile and laugh at men's jokes. Men may be attracted to the childlike quality of blonde hair, because it implies that the blonde woman won't be their rival. And if you've bothered to dye your hair, that may well be true!"

'Personal, Sunday Mirror'

- 1p ○ 15 → Waarom heeft Flic Everett haar haren geblondeerd, volgens alinea 1?
- 1p ● 16 Who is meant by 'The bloke in question' (line 11)?
the man who
A advised Flic to change the colour of her hair
B dyed Flic's hair from brown to blonde
C had always shown a lot of interest in Flic
D was the object of Flic's attention
- 1p ● 17 Why does Flic compare herself with a 'tragic heroin addict' (lines 17-18)?
because of
A the amount of money her new hair style had cost
B the kind of attention men gave her new hair style
C the way her new hair style looked after a while
- 1p ● 18 What did blonde-haired Flic find out about men, according to paragraph 3?
A They disliked brunettes.
B They hated stupid women.
C They preferred natural blondes.
D They were interested in her body not her brains.
- 1p ● 19 Why does Christian Gardiner advise women to dye their hair blonde (paragraph 5)?
A It gives women a good excuse to buy new clothes.
B It helps women to be taken more seriously.
C It makes women feel better about themselves.
- 2p ○ 20 → Met welke twee problemen krijg je volgens Liz Baker te maken als je je haar laat blonderen (alinea 6)?
- 1p ● 21 Which of the following may be true about women who dye their hair blonde, according to Hal Beloff (paragraph 7)?
A They do not know what to expect from men in a relationship.
B They see women as superior to men.
C They want a new relationship very badly.
D They want to show men that they are not a threat to them.
- 1p ● 22 De titel van het verhaal is 'Blondes, do they really have more fun?'
Welke persoon zal deze vraag volmondig met 'ja' beantwoorden?

D Hal Beloff

- 1p ● 23 Volgens de advertentie van 'Save the Children' heeft Anita door studie haar problemen opgelost.
 Hoe heeft ze bijvoorbeeld haar winst kunnen verhogen volgens de advertentie?
 door haar producten
A aan een ander soort klanten aan te bieden
B goedkoper te laten produceren
C zonder tussenpersoon te verkopen

Anita is good at her work. So she should be. She's been doing it for nine hours a day since she was six years old.

The embroideries she produces in India often end up in department stores in Europe and North America, where they sell for good money. But until recently Anita saw virtually none of it. Instead it was all going into the hands of an unscrupulous middleman.

Then Anita began attending night classes supported by Save the Children. Here she learnt about "market rates", "the selling process" and "how to keep accounts".

As a consequence she cut out the middleman and increased her profit by 1,733% – from 12p per item to £2.20.

Around the world, over 120 million children under the age of 14 work full time. Helping them to secure decent pay is just one of the ways in which Save the Children is tackling child poverty.

One jump ahead: a new company is offering breaks with a difference for canines in Scotland

Breaks with a difference

- 1 Britain's first company specialising in arranging holidays for people with dogs had its first customers this week.
- 2 The company has been set up by Margaret McCabe, a dog-trainer, and offers holidays in and around the historic fishing village of Anstruther.
- 3 Ms McCabe, who is from Anstruther, decided to create Dog Days Activity Holidays after disappointing holiday experiences with her own dog. "Even in places that claim to be dog-friendly, you sometimes have to feed your dog in the car," she said. "Our hotels and B&Bs have a bone system of grading,
- 4 which will be determined by what facilities are available, such as access to enclosed gardens and dog-sitting."
- 4 The holidays are designed to offer dogs "a break from their normal routine" and include activities such as guided country walks, agility games, orienteering, rounders and even canoeing, aromatherapy and spinning dog's hair into yarn. Sessions with dog handlers and behaviourists can be added to the package holidays, which last for two to five days.

A day in the life of...

Animal supplier David Manning

When the producers of a soap series are looking for love birds, or an ad agency needs an armadillo, they call David. His company, Animal Ark, supplies all creatures great and small for TV shows, films and adverts. David (37) lives in London, with his partner Jenny (36), their children Jack (3) and Georgia (18 months) – plus a cat, a dog, a tarantula, and a collection of snakes, lizards, newts and frogs.

1 I can never be sure from one day to the next exactly what I will be doing. One day I could be looking after some mice for a movie, the next day I could be trying to track down a stuffed leopard for a TV commercial. Most of the animals I keep – mainly snakes, lizards, frogs and spiders – live in a large purpose-built animal room in the garden. I also have a large brick-built office at the end of the garden where I keep props – fibre-glass sharks, elephant heads, rhinos and alligators. Down in the office you'll also find odd things that I've been asked for over the years. There are skulls and skeletons, a full-sized stuffed greyhound dog, a family of tortoises and a bucketful of crickets that I'm bringing up.

2 Most of the requests only give a few days' notice. 26 I keep a good selection at home, I spend a lot of time tracking down other items. I was once asked to find a three-legged dog for an INXS pop video. I eventually tracked one down in Guildford. One of my most popular animals is my tarantula, Erica. I've had this spider since she was tiny. She's 25 now and has been with me through thick and thin. She's a star, she's been on TV dozens of times, in ads and pop videos. Erica has appeared with Boyzone, the Manic Street Preachers and Sting.

3 When I'm on set with an animal, it's my job to take care of it: I make sure it's warm, well-fed and doesn't get hurt or scared by inexperienced handlers. And also that the actors don't come to any grief either. I was recently on the set of a TV drama series with rats, mice, cockroaches and 10,000 flies. You might not think flies need a lot of looking after but you have to make sure they are kept in the right conditions. All animals need an independent person there to look after their welfare.

4 I got into this business after I left school and started to work for someone who sold animals. We'd get lots of calls from people wanting to borrow a cobra or a rattlesnake for a film, and I realised that there was a demand for someone to supply them. So I started my own business called Animal Ark. I'm out every day. I remember cooking up a batch of juicy insects for a banquet scene in the Oscar-winning movie Gladiator. Some were roasted, some glazed with honey, some caramelised, some were skewered on sticks and barbecued. They don't taste bad at all.

The Kaohsiung-Pingtung bridge, which collapsed yesterday

At least 20 injured in bridge collapse

A BUSY river bridge in southwestern Taiwan collapsed yesterday, injuring at least 20 people.

A 100-metre section of the four-lane bridge, which connects the cities of Kaohsiung and Pingtung, fell but the road surface was not under water, and 16 stranded automobiles were evacuated.

A Kaohsiung county fire department official told cable broadcaster ETV that 20 people had been hospitalised with minor injuries.

The official said that witnesses gave conflicting accounts, with Pingtung-bound drivers saying they saw automobiles fall into the water, and Kaohsiung-bound travellers saying that no cars had fallen off the bridge into the Gaoping River. About three hours after the collapse at 3pm local time (0700 GMT) military, police and fire department rescuers were searching downstream for signs of vehicles that may have been washed down the river, the official said.

Puppy Love

At just 14, Shad Moss, also known as rap star 'Lil Bow Wow', has topped the US rap charts with 'Bounce with me' and sold more than 2 million copies of his first album Beware of dog. He can already count famous stars as Snoop Doggy Dogg and Madonna among his friends and fans.

1 How do you entertain the world's coolest kid on his visit to London? When he's at home in America, Shad parties with Puff Daddy, works with stars like Snoop Doggy Dogg and Destiny's Child and sometimes meets Michael Jackson and Michael Jordan at the same party. Fortunately, like for any 14-year-old kid, a trip to the Trocadero, London's biggest games arcade, is just as exciting.

2 "London is great," he says. "I have been shopping. I bought sneakers, four computer games and three DVDs. And I have been playing basketball. When I'm done rapping, I'm going to play for the Lakers." It seems cruel to spoil the kid's dreams, but with only 140 centimetres he is likely to be a bit short for a basketball player. But not to worry, he has back-up plans. After graduating from Harvard University, he says he will become the biggest rap star on the planet and then he'll make movies.

3 Back in the States, Shad is so hot that, last month, Madonna was on the phone. "She said she really wanted me to do a television show with her. I said: 'Sure, why not?' It was crazy, we did two days of rehearsals for one song. I had to drive her limo on stage, then I was dancing. She asked me to make her look good. I said: 'Madonna, no problem.'"

4 To Shad, all this celebrity attention seems 35. It's probably because he has been in the rap business for as long as he can remember. He was five when he talked his mother Teresa – now his manager and stylist – into taking him to see Dr. Dre's Chronic Tour. Snoop Doggy Dogg spotted him in the crowd and hauled him on stage. "I went up there, began rapping, and the crowd started throwing all this money at me," he recalls. "Next thing you know, Snoop wants me backstage. So I went and he and Dr. Dre asked if I would finish the tour with them. The next day I was in L.A., opening the show."

5 Shad had already taught himself to rap by watching famous rappers like Ice-T and Tupac on MTV and singing to his mother's kitchen utensils. But it was Snoop Doggy Dogg who changed his name to 'Lil Bow Wow' and gave him his special hairstyle. A year later he was a guest artist on Snoop's multimillion selling album Doggystyle and he had contributed a song to Will Smith's Wild Wild West movie soundtrack.

6 The dope-smoking, foul-mouthed Snoop may be a bad example, but Shad hasn't let fame go to his head. Although it took a while to get him to stop playing basketball and sit down for an interview, he turns out to be polite and well-mannered. "Shad hasn't changed," his mother insists. "He doesn't show off about all the money that he makes, though I had to stop him buying a diamond watch the other day."

7 Otherwise, Shad is setting a good example to his young fans. At concerts last year in America, he was mobbed by hundreds of female fans, but he says he is still too young for a girlfriend. What's more, he has made a point of not swearing in his songs. "When I rapped on Doggystyle, Snoop had me cursing. But I don't do that anymore. There are a lot of kids out there who can't buy records with bad words. My thing is to make clean music that everybody can buy."
